Although the Boston entry in the American League is now in its 82nd season, the Red Sox nickname wasn't adopted until 1907. The team was known as the Pilgrims in those days and played their games at the Huntington Ave. grounds where Northeastern U. now stands. Fenway Park opened in 1912 and was reconstructed in 1934 by the late Tom Yawkey during his first year of ownership.

Over 26 million fans have attended games in Fenway Park in the last 15 years and during that span the Red Sox have been the only major league team to have a winning record every single season. In 1981 the Red Sox were an exciting, come-from-behind team under the astute direction of Manager Ralph Houk, and were in the Eastern Division race until the final weekend. In 1967 and 1975 American League championships were won and classic World Series followed against St. Louis and Cincin-

9/3/64, Jim 3/21/67, Jana 5/15/68, Jennifer 9/25/66, Christopher 11/1/67.

The Red Sox had a much-improved pitching staff in 1981 and much of the credit went to Stange. He was selected by Ralph Houk to be pitching coach in Nov. 1981 after a six-year absence from the Red Sox major league staff. He rejoined the Sox in 1980 as a minor league pitching instructor on the Triple A and Double A levels and served as a West Coast scout.

"Stinger" ended a 10-year major league career in 1970 and was the Red Sox minor league pitching coach in 1971 before moving up to the club's major league staff in 1972-74. He held the same position with the Twins in 1975 and then joined the Oakland organization in 1976 as a minor league instructor. He was the A's pitching coach 1977-79 and helped develop the young pitching staff that became one of the A.L.'s best in 1980-81.

Stange had a 62-61 major league record with the Twins, Indians, Red Sox and White Sox. He came to Boston 6/2/66 from the Indians with pitcher Don McMahon for Dick Radatz. He was 8-10 with a 2.77 ERA (best on the team) during the 1967 pennant-winning season and the Sox best reliever in 1968 with 5 wins and 11 saves in 50 games. On 6/29/70 he was sold to the White Sox. "Stinger" was All State in baseball and All Chicago in basketball at Proviso Township H.S. He was also a football quarterback and teammate of former NFL star Ray Nitschke, and went to Drake U. on a football scholarship. On 9/2/64 he tied the M.L. record of 4 strikeouts in one inning for the Indians.

Yost is highly-regarded among baseball people for the excellent job he does as third base coach. Quick thinking and thorough knowledge of the opposition's strengths and weaknesses are necessary ingredients for a successful third base coach, and Yost has always demonstrated those attributes. Eddie is in his sixth year at that spot for the Red Sox after doing likewise for the Mets, 1968-76 and Washington Senators, 1963-67. He was with the Mets in the 1969 and 1973 World Series.

World Series.

"The Walking Man," as he was known during his 17-year major league career, was an outstanding third baseman and leadoff hitter. He led the A.L. six times in walks, had over 100 walks eight times, scored over 100 runs five times and twice led the league in fielding. He still holds the A.L. record of 28 home runs as leadoff batter.

He was traded from Washington to Detroit in Dec. of 1958 and was selected by the Angels in baseball's first expansion draft, Dec. 14, 1960. When Yost retired after the 1962 season he held the major league record for most games at third base (2,008) and the A.L. marks for putouts (2,356), assists (3,659) and chances (6,015). ome people said he'd be the next Jackie Jensen, a guy who'd walk into Fenway and move "The Wall" another six inches towards Kenmore Square. Others said he'd be another Frank Malzone, some even suggested a righthanded George Brett.

But when the 1981 season was over, what Carney Lansford turned out to be is just such a talented, hard-nosed player, that he'll never have to be compared to anyone else again. "From now on," says teammate Jerry Remy, "when some kid comes along that they say is 'a winning player,' they'll say 'he's another Lansford."

For, as much as the individual honors—the batting title, Sporting News and wire service all star teams, sixth in MVP voting—rolled in, what the prize of Haywood Sullivan's mega-deal with California for Rick Burleson turned out to be is a winner. "I've played on a division winner and I've played on a loser," says the 25-year-old Lansford, "and I know what's important in this game." Hence we saw him, in the midst of a fight for the batting title, come up three times in September with runners on second and none out and give himself up with ground balls to second base.

In contrast, we also saw one of his competitors for the title, Seattle's Richie Zisk, take himself out of games twice when faced with Mark Clear. "To my way of thinking," says Lansford, "you throw your head in front of a pitch to get on base." When Lansford was, in fact, beaned by California's Mike Witt and was back in the lineup four days later. But then his .336 average (which includes 19 game-tying or go-ahead RBI, a .366 average with men on base and .388 with runners in scoring position) was accomplished despite being sidelined four times with injuries.

Atra is the first razor with a head that pivots to follow every contour of your face. Stroke after stroke, it's right on the money.

This Atra "face-hugging" action keeps the twinblades working at the perfect shaving angle. No other razor could ever do that.

CARNEY LANGEOURD - A TOUGH COMPETITOR

"People sometimes think I'm just being political when I say my goal is to bring a pennant to Boston," Lansford says, "but I'm not. Sure, I have individual goals, like the batting title or a gold glove. But I grew up in a competitive atmosphere. I'd always won. And in 1980 when I played on a (California) team that lost nearly 100 games and had individuals having to perform only for themselves, I knew that the only thing to play for in this game is to win."

So it's always been with Lansford. "I always knew he was into the game," says his father, Tony, "from the first time I took him to see one of his brother Ernie's games at the age of four. Carney was the only kid I ever saw who never wanted to go to the concessions stand. He stayed there and watched the whole game, and when he got home, all he'd talk about was the game."

Tony Lansford now lives on a ranch in Oklahoma, a ranch three of his sons helped buy him with their baseball bonus money. But at the end of World War II he had to move off his ranch in Texas to move to Santa Clara, California to take a job with the Libby Cannery, where he turned the Lansford house into the town's athletic factory.

"Baseball was the best way I knew to keep them off the streets," Tony says. So Carney remembers "our household being incredible—always some kind of game going on. Competitive? Vicious might be a better word."

Ernie, 28, is the oldest of the five sons. He was an outstanding high school pitcher until he hurt his arm. Then came Gary, who is 6-7 and 275 pounds and despite junior college home run records never got a chance professionally. Carney is in the middle, followed by Phil, 22, and Jody, 20.

While Carney was only a third round draft pick out of high school, Phil and Jody were both number ones by the Indians and Padres, respectively. Phil is now an infielder with Toronto's Knoxville club in the Southern League, while Jody is one of San Diego's top prospects after hitting 26 homers in the Texas League.

But Carney was always the winner. His Little League team made it all the way to the finals in Williamsport, Pa., losing to Taiwan. He broke his wrist in the semifinals, but took the cast off so he could play in the finals. The rest of the way, through high school and the minor leagues on to the Angels' Divisional title in 1979, he never played on a team that finished lower than second.

"The Red Sox may not have finished first or second (last year)," he says, "but we were in it right down to the last weekend. And we had the type of attitude it takes to win. I found out that some of the things I'd heard about the attitude here were simply not true."

What Lansford expected to find in Boston wasn't exactly so, what Boston found in Lansford was a little different than what people anticipated. Scouts and managers thought he would hit 25 to 30 home runs. "I'm not that kind of hitter," he explains. "When the trade was made, I told myself, 'you can hit 25-30 homers and hit .240, or hit .300 and use all of your abilities.' To me, because I can run, average and total bases are more important than home runs."

"I had an idea what I wanted to do, but it wasn't until I got to spring training and met Walter Hriniak that I could put it into practice. Before, when I took batting practice, I always tried to hit the ball hard somewhere. I'd make up my mind to hit the ball to right, for instance, then get jammed if the pitch was in on me."

THE NEW LOOK RED SOX

by Chaz Scoggins

hey were to be baseball's new dynasty.

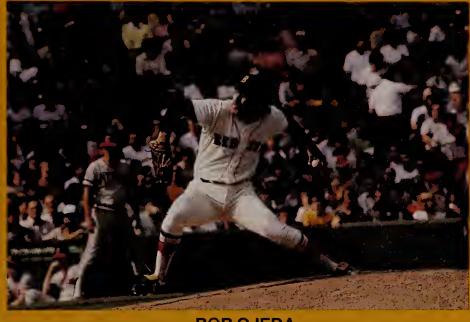

In 1975 the Red Sox had ended Oakland's three-year reign as World Champions with a three-game sweep in the American League playoffs. No matter that they lost the World Series in seven thrilling games to Cincinnati; the Red Sox would be back, and they would win several World Champion-ships before they were through.

But something happened along the way to all those pennants and World Series rings, and nobody can put his finger on exactly what the cause or causes were. Some say the pitching simply wasn't good enough. Some point to untimely injuries to key players and a weak bench which wasn't capable of filling the voids. Others blame Don Zimmer. A few even claim the Red Sox just didn't have enough character to win the crucial games.

Whatever the reasons, the Red Sox haven't been back on top since 1975. The young dynasts smothered in the folds of purple robes too large for them.

Their failure certainly wasn't due to lack of individual talent. Of the 10 players who were regulars during most of the second half of the '70s, eight made the All-Star Team at least once. In 1977 alone the Red Sox had seven players on the All-Star Team. And in the six All-Star Games from 1975-80, the Red Sox were all long-suffering American League supporters had to cheer about as they accounted for all five of their squad's home runs and drove in 12 of the A.L.'s 20 runs.

Few will argue that during the second half of the last decade the Red Sox, when they were healthy, had the most awesome everyday lineup in the league, if not in baseball. On what other team could you find a Butch Hobson batting eighth or ninth while socking 30 homers and driving in over 100 runs? Among the players who were more or less regulars during all or most of those years there were three Most Valuable Players. There were two batting champions and six hitters who had batted .300 in the majors at least once. There were three home run champions and eight sluggers who had belted 20 or more homers at least once — five of them 30 or more. There were three RBI champions and six players who had driven in 100 runs one or more times. Defense? Six of the Big Ten had won Gold Gloves for fielding excellence.

BOB OJEDA

The catch was keeping them all healthy for 162 games. In 1977 and 1978 the regular lineup was on the field at the same time for less than one-quarter of the schedule. In 1979 they were together for exactly three games.

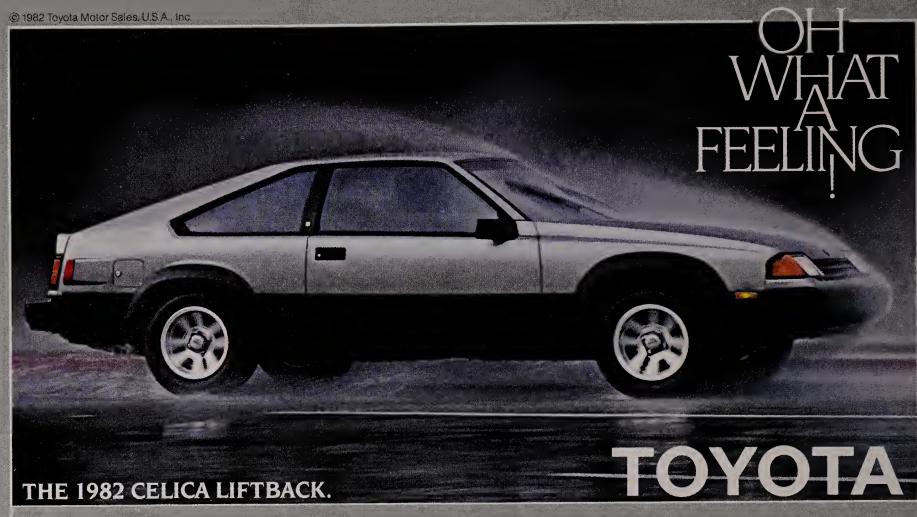

By the end of the decade Red Sox fans had started to become disenchanted with the team. The turnstiles at base-ball's smallest park had clicked nearly 10,400,000 times during the five years of this "dynasty". But in 1980 attendance at Fenway Park dropped nearly 20 percent.

After the Red Sox, who trailed by just five games on Labor Day 1980, faded to 19 games off the pace by the end of the campaign, Haywood Sullivan, Buddy LeRoux, and the rest of the club's brain trust decided they could not afford to go any further, financially or aesthetically, with the club as it was currently structured. Although there had been nearmisses in 1977 and 1978, the bottom line was that the club had not won since 1975. Changes, drastic changes, had to be made.

Right now, you need a car that does more than just look good. It needs to have an efficient shape too. Like the new Celica GT Liftback. Now that's the right stuff!

Engineers say it's right. Celica's shape is so aerodynamically slippery it cheats the wind. Celica actually has a lower coefficient of drag — just 0.342 — than the Porsche 928!

And the right shape, plus Celica's hightorque 2.4 liter single overhead cam engine, equals the right performance.

Experts say it's right.

As Motor Trend noted, "Celica's shape is clean and highly contemporary — strong angularity diluted with just a little organic roundness."

GOODMAN

Red Sox infielder-outfielder 1947-1957 Wore No. 28 1947, No. 10 thereafter

Then: Billy Goodman was a versatile player who could hit.

The native of Concord, N.C., won the 1950 American League batting championship with an average of .354, the highest mark posted by any Boston player in the post-World War II period except for Ted Williams' .369 in 1948 and .388 in 1957. He played five positions in 1950—45 games in the outfield, 27 at third base, 21 at first base, five at second base and one at shortstop.

No other batting king has played so many positions in his title year. From 1948 until his departure for Baltimore early in the 1957 season, the 5-11, 165-pound lefthanded hitter, who sprayed the ball to all fields, never batted below .293. He had five .300 seasons.

Goodman's batting average for the Red Sox was .306 and ranks eighth on the club's all-time list. Entering 1982 he was 10th in games with 1,177, eighth in at bats with 4,399 and hits with 1,344, seventh in doubles with 248 and ninth in runs with 688.

Goodman, who was with the Orioles, Chicago White Sox and Houston Astros after leaving Boston, played 16 years in all. He compiled a .300 lifetime batting average.

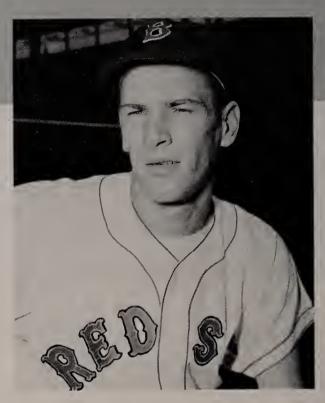

Now: Goodman, now 56, lives in Sarasota, Fla., where the ex-player has a variety of interests.

"I'm busy doing one thing or another," Goodman says. "I've some commercial property that I lease and look out for. My wife has a shop for antiques and collectibles. I help her out, hauling furniture around for her. And I farm, raising sweet onions."

BILLY GOODMAN

Goodman remained in baseball after his playing career ended in 1962, managing minor league teams for Houston. He ended his association with the professional part of the game in 1970 after serving three years as a coach with the Atlanta Braves.

"I'm on the Board of Directors for a Babe Ruth League in Sarasota" Goodman says. "That's my only connection with baseball nowadays. If the kids want any help, I'm always glad to provide it."

Quotes: What was your biggest thrill playing for the Red Sox?

"The biggest thing was being there. I was proud to be a member of the Red Sox."

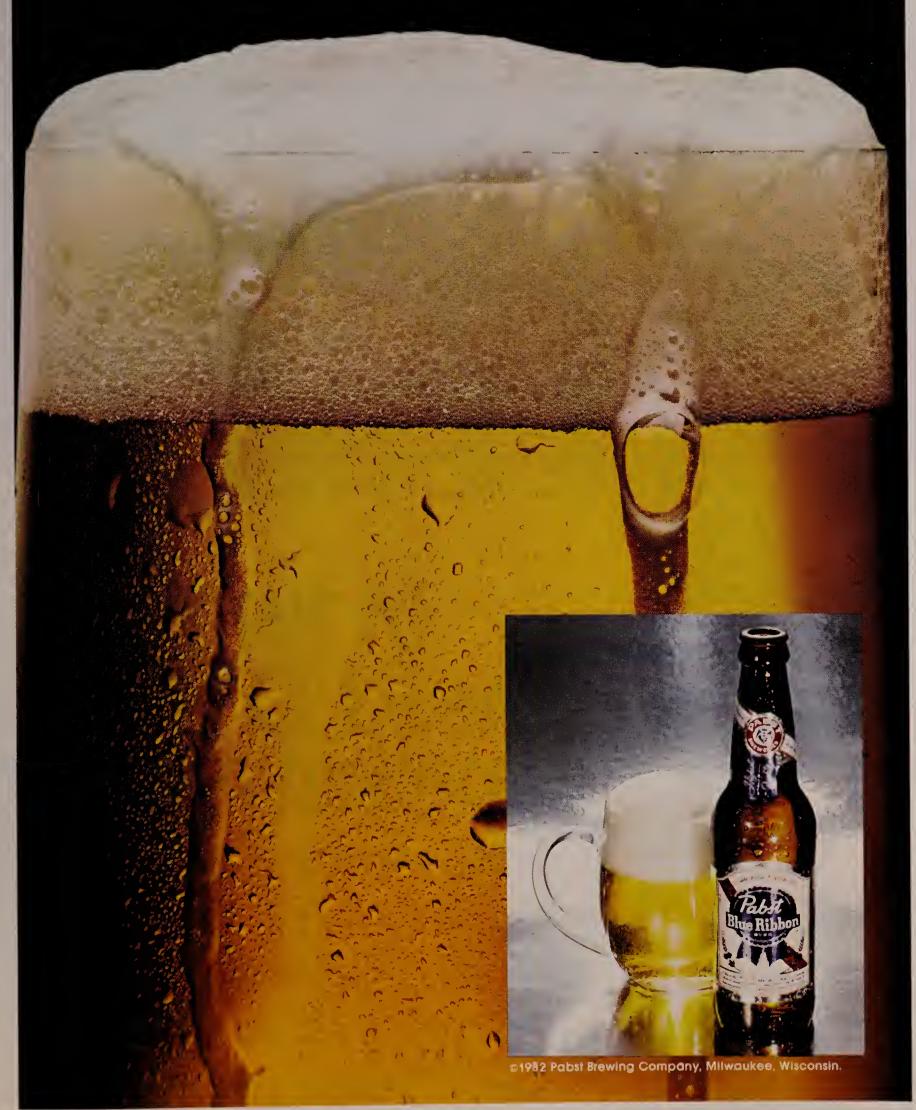

Were you a Red Sox fan growing up? "No, I was a Yankee fan. Those were the days of Ruth and Gehrig and those other great players. I followed them through the newspapers and radio. There wasn't any television then. If there had been, I might have been a fan of some other team."

Have you any other special memories of your days with the Red Sox? "Yes, playing for Joe McCarthy (Boston's manager in 1948, 1949 and part of 1950). He was great to play for."

The Red Sox of that period had some frustrating experiences, losing a playoff t's a fact of political life that few elections attract much voter enthusiasm despite numerous "get out the vote" campaigns.

But one election that always generates interest, creates controversy and gets a large turnout is the Gillette fan balloting for Baseball's All-Star Game.

Fan participation in choosing the National and American League All-Star teams dates to 1933. But it wasn't until 1970, when Commissioner Bowie Kuhn and Gillette instituted a computer card system, that voting really caught on.

This year fans again will choose the starting lineups for the All-Star Game. The 53rd mid-season classic will be played July 13 at Montreal's Olympic Stadium. Pitchers and reserves will be chosen by the league offices in consultation with All-Star managers.

Here's how the voting works: the process begins when more than 200 leading baseball writers, broadcasters, Continued to Page 40

By JOE GIULIOTTI

The terms "headed for greatness" or "has a can't miss future" are familiar ones used by the media in describing an athlete who has shown tremendous potential in college or a minor league sport.

But, how many measure up to the advance billing? Many do, but more often there is failure or a few fleeting moments of glory followed by a general decline and, finally, disappearance from the scene.

The true test of greatness is high performance and longevity. Only a select group has achieved it and Red Sox fans have been fortunate to have watched one of the truly greats of the game the past 21 years.

When Carl Michael Yastrzemski was signed out of Notre Dame he was brought to get his first look at Fenway Park. As a 19-year-old he toured the ballpark and observed, "I can hit here."

He's playing against people who weren't born the day he made that statement and still doing what he predicted he would — hit.

At age 42, he's certainly not the player he once was but still commands the utmost respect from rivals. Oh, every once in a while some young pitcher — or for that matter even a veteran — will try to sneak the fastball past the "old man" and has to watch it ripped somewhere.

Yastrzemski is playing ball at an age he should be enjoying his second love — fishing. There are those who feel he'll tarnish his great image by playing past his time, such as Willie Mays and Hank Aaron did.

"When I can't hit any more I'll pick up my bat and glove and go home," is Yastrzemski's response to that. "I know I can't hit as I used to, but I feel I can still hit well enough to play in the major leagues."

During the strike-shortened season of 1981, Yastrzemski missed getting 100 hits for the first time in his professional career. He had 83 but easily would have reached 100 if a full season had been played.

Showing he hadn't slowed all that much, he drove in 16 of 22 runners from third with less than two out, had seven home runs, each of which either tied a game or put the Red Sox ahead and, during the stretch drive when the Red Sox made their run at the second half East Division title, batted .300 in August and knocked in 17 runs in September.

One of the greatest compliments paid to Yastrzemski last season came from Detroit Tiger manager Sparky Anderson, after his team had lost four straight to the Red Sox in mid-

September to all but knock them out of the divisional title.

"If I had someone like Yastrzemski or Tony Perez on my club, I'd win it," he said. "Not so much for what they can do on the field but just having them on the ballclub. But, I don't have anyone like that."

Yes, Yastrzemski has more than survived the test of time. Even before he played his first major league game, he was under a microscope. He was replacing another Red Sox legend named Ted Williams in left field.

He gave indications of what was to come on opening day in 1961 in Fenway Park when he got his first big league hit off Ray Herbert and later threw a runner out at home plate.

From there he went on to become a legend in his own time. His moments of glory and achievements would fill more pages than a novel.

Perhaps his finest hour came on the night of September 12, 1979 when he grounded a single past the glove of New York Yankee second baseman Willie Randolph to become the 15th player in major league history to collect 3,000 hits. It also made him the first in the American League to have 3,000 hits and 400 home runs. The latter figure was achieved two months earlier when he connected off Oakland A's righthander Mike Morgan, also in Fenway Park.

Entering 1982, he had 3,058 games under his belt (the second most in history) and 11,149 at bats (fourth on the all-time list).

A few of his career highlights include Most Valuable Player in 1967; Gold Glove winner in 1963-65-67-68-69-71-77 (in 1977 his fielding percentage was 1.000); American League career record for intentional walks (161); triple crown winner in 1967; three times the American League slugging winner (1965-67-70); league leader in outfield assists seven times (1962-63-64-66-69-71-77); 16 times selected to the American League All-Star team and the MVP of the 1970 game; and coholder of a major league record with five home runs in two games (May 19-20, 1976, three against the Detroit Tigers and two vs. the New York Yankees, one coming off lefthander Ron Guidry).

1967 was his personal best as far as all around performance when he almost single handedly led the Red Sox to the "Impossible Dream" pennant. He batted .326, hit 44 home runs and knocked in 121. During the final two games of the season against the Minnesota Twins — games the Red Sox could not lose, he was a staggering seven for eight.

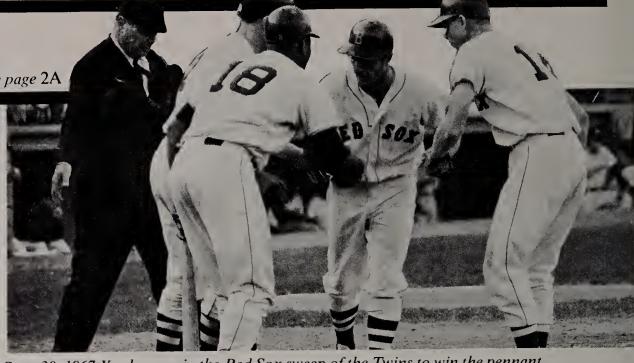

Six times he's hit over .300, winning the batting title in 1963-67-68. In 1970 he lost out on the final day to Alex Johnson when both ended with .329 marks, but Johnson won by three percentage points when the average was stretched to five figures.

Yastrzemski has refused to look back at his accomplishments and does not like to dwell on them. "I never look back, always ahead," is one of his favorite sayings.

There's one goal which has eluded him and one he talks about — a World Series championship. Twice he's played in the series and each went to the deciding seventh game before the Red Sox lost. In 1967 it was to the St. Louis Cardinals and 1975 to the Cincinnati Reds, in one of baseball's most memorable World Series.

"That's another reason I decided to come back," he said. "I believe in this team and Ralph Houk. I honestly feel we have a chance and I know I can contribute."

Whether the team wins or whether he has a good year, Yastrzemski long ago stamped himself as one of the all-time greats. He has survived the test. He's defied "Father Time" but he can't hold on against him much longer. When Number Eight finally cleans out his locker, it will be like losing a New England landmark. But when he goes, he most certainly will not be forgotten.

1967 was his personal best as far as Sept. 30, 1967 Yaz homers in the Red Sox sweep of the Twins to win the pennant.

You can always spot a Genius by its features.

Look closely at the new SL-5000. It is innovative. Yet understandable. Sophisticated. Yet uncomplicated.

Clearly, this is no ordinary video cassette recorder.

Clearly, this is a product of Genius. The Genius of Betamax.

To start with, you'll notice that the Sony Betamax SL-5000 has advanced front loading. In fact, everything is right on the front. So it's fast, easy and convenient to use, particularly in confined spaces.

And here's another stroke of Genius. The Sony Betamax gives you all the record functions on the left; all the playback functions on the right. That's one more reason the SL-5000—for all its sophistication—is remarkably simple to operate.

Now consider these advantages. The SL-5000 lets you tape one show while you're watching another. And it can be programmed in advance. Which means you're able to record even when you're not at home.

Naturally, it wouldn't be a Sony Betamax without the electronic marvel we call BetaScan. With BetaScan, you can actually see what you're looking for in fast-forward and fast-reverse; then stop when you find it.

There's more. The SL-5000 has Express Tuning to take you directly to the channel you want, skipping the channels in between. It also includes remote control, freeze frame, electronic feather-touch controls.... In fact, almost every important feature you can think of. Plus one you'd probably never dream of: a reasonable price tag.

Of course, to fully appreciate the brilliance of the SL-5000, you have to see it in person. So stop in at your Sony dealer and ask to watch a Genius at play.

To insure brilliant performance every time, always use Sony Beta cassettes.

The Genius of Betamax SONY® THE ONE AND ONLY

It's Easy to Keep Score

Baseball Shorthand, as used by the news media to render every game more enjoyable to baseball enthusiasts. All players are numbered and all plays recorded by symbols. For symbols and example of system, see below.

CODE NUMBER OF PLAYERS AS FOLLOWS

Pitcher	1	Second Baseman	4	Left Fielder	7
Catcher	2	Third Baseman	5	Center Fielder	8
First Baseman	3	Shortstop	6	Right Fielder	9

SYMBOLS FOR PLAYS

Single —		Fielder's Choice Hit by Pitcher	FC HP	Passed Ball Balk	PB BK
Triple	=	Wild Pitch	WP	Struck Out	K
Home Run		Stolen Base	SB	Base on Balls	BB
Reached base on error	Е	Sacrifice	SAC	Force Out	FO

The lower lefthand corner of the scoring block should be considered as home plate. Progress is counter-clockwise with progress to first base indicated in lower righthand corner, to second in upper righthand corner, to third in upper lefthand corner and to home in lower left. In example to left, batter reached first on an error by the second baseman, stole second, went to third on a wild pitch and scored on a passed ball. It is convenient to encircle all runs as shown so that scoring plays may be seen at a glance.

Ken Coleman and Jon Miller

After two years together, the successful duo of Ken Coleman and Jon Miller will again team-up behind the mike for the WITS Red Sox radio network. This combination of youth and experience offers unique insight into the game of baseball.

Coleman, the executive director of the Jimmy Fund, is a long-time Boston favorite. He has been with the Red Sox on radio and TV for twelve years. Miller, who is only 29 years old, has been on radio since he was in high school. He has spent the last two years of his career with the Red Sox.

In all, Coleman has over 30 years broadcasting experience; 10 years with the Cleveland Indians, 14 years with the Cleveland Browns, 2 years with NBC football, five years of Harvard football, and play-by-play announcer for seven NFL championship games. His other credits include four years as announcer for the Cincinnati Reds on TV, and as the voice of Ohio State football. His broadcasting excellence has won Coleman 12 AFTRA awards.

At San Mateo College (CA.), Miller worked in radio and then went on to work at a TV station in Santa Rosa (CA.). From there he went to the Oakland Seals of the National Hockey League, becoming the youngest play-by-play announcer in the league's history.

Following 1974 with the Oakland A's baseball team, he broadcast games for the San Francisco Dons basketball team and worked for the TV networks of the San Jose Earthquakes and Washington Diplomats of the North American Soccer League.

Miller found his way back into baseball, joining the broadcasting team of the Texas Rangers, and later with Coleman and the Red Sox network.

There's a new team in the TV 38 (WSBK) booth for Red Sox games this year. Veteran Ned Martin now works with newcomer Bob Montgomery in TV 38's eighth straight year with the Red Sox.

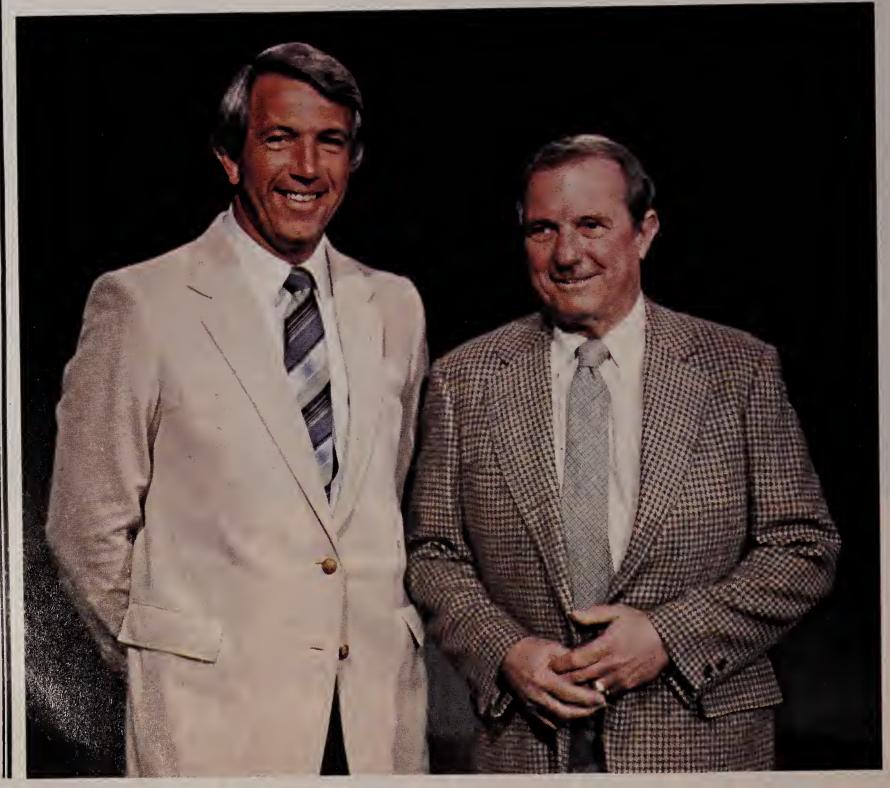

Martin, one of the most popular announcers in the New England area, is now in his 22nd year of radio-TV Red Sox play-by-play, and his fourth with TV 38. Ned graduated from Duke University and served in the Marine Corps before starting his career by announcing minor league games. He joined Curt Gowdy on the Red Sox network in 1961 and has been a favorite with the fans ever since. In the fall of 1979 he went to Japan to telecast games between the Major League All Stars and Japanese teams, and from 1976-78 he broadcast the American League Championship Series games on the CBS Radio network.

Montgomery replaced Ken Harrelson at TV 38. He was a catcher in the Red Sox organization from 1962 until he retired in the spring of 1980. Monty came to the majors to stay in 1971 and was recognized as one of the best reserve catchers in baseball. In 1973 the Boston Baseball Writers voted him their "Unsung Hero Award," and in 1972 he was named the BoSox Club "Man of the Year." An arm injury in 1979 brought an early retirement to his playing career. The past two years he was associated with WITS Radio doing a sports talk show and some announcing and color commentary of Red Sox games.

players, field and general managers, and team public relations directors nominate the candidates. Each team is represented among the 72 nominees from each league.

In late April, the nominees are announced by the Commissioner's office. Then ballots are distributed to major and minor league ballparks and to retail stores featuring a Gillette All-Star display. Completed ballots can be mailed directly to computer headquarters or deposited in Gillette retail displays or at ballpark ballot boxes.

In the first 12 years of Gillette fan balloting close to 90 million votes were cast and the total is expected to exceed 100 million in 1982. George Brett won the 1981 Gillette Trophy as the leading vote getter with 1,144,272 votes (1981 balloting was curtailed by the baseball strike).

The 1982 voting program will also include an exciting and profitable Gillette All-Star sweepstakes. Fans who complete the ballot entry blank will automatically become eligible to win a Grand Prize of $25,000. Another 1,000 fans will win second prizes of a Sony "Walkman" Stereo Cassette Player. No purchase is necessary.

So now you have the know-how to vote. Just get out your scorecards, and calculators, or use just plain ol' baseball sense and prepare to vote in the nation's largest non-political election.

for the American League title in 1948 and finishing second one game out in 1949. Have you any regrets? "No, I did my best; my teammates did their best. It just wasn't meant to be. What happened was that (Dave) Ferriss' and (Tex) Hughson's arms went bad and Mickey Harris started to have arm trouble, too. You can lose one pitcher, but you can't replace three. But we hung in there."

Did the left field wall in Fenway Park help you, a lefthanded hitter? "It sure did. I didn't have to think about pulling. I could go with the pitch."

Who was the toughest pitcher you ever faced? "Hoyt Wilhelm. He was tough with that knuckleball. I don't think anybody had success with him when he was able to get his pitches over the plate."

Who was the best lefthanded hitter you saw? "Ted Williams."

Who was the best righthanded hitter you saw? "Joe DiMaggio."

And the best all-around player you saw? "I've never thought of it that way."

Are you looking forward to the Old-Timers Game at Fenway Park? "If I'm alive, I'll be there. I was really happy to receive an invitation. It will be great to see many of those I played with. And it will be great to be back in Boston."

Faced with having to cough up as much as $13 million over the next few years to satisfy the contract demands of Fred Lynn, Carlton Fisk, and Rick Burleson, the club let all three of them go. Lynn, Burleson, and Butch Hobson were traded to the Angels. Fisk became a free agent on a technicality and signed with the White Sox. George Scott and Bernie Carbo had been traded a couple of years earlier, and of the Big Ten who had elated and deflated Red Sox fans for six years, only Carl Yastrzemski, Jim Rice, Dwight Evans, and Jerry Remy

The disillusioned fans were skeptical at first, even though the Red Sox got off to a decent start. But as the club stayed in the thick of the tight races during both halves of the split season, even moving into first place for a day in late September, the curiosity of the fans was aroused. And as they began drifting back to Fenway Park, they liked what they saw.

And why not? The new Red Sox were aggressive, the new Red Sox were exciting, and, most importantly, the new Red Sox were a TEAM. They were never Gedman and Bobby Ojeda make major contributions. And they saw the Red Sox go down to the final weekend of the season before being eliminated from playoff contention.

Okay, they didn't win (so what else is new? sniff the hard-core critics), and maybe they haven't absolutely convinced the fans they are genuine contenders yet. But these Red Sox did leave them with some warm feelings for a change. Pre-season ticket sales were reportedly at their highest level in three years.

RICH GEDMAN

remained to form the nucleus for the new Red Sox.

Don Zimmer was fired after 4½ controversial years as manager. The organization announced it would sign no more high-priced free agents and would use that money instead to build from within.

Still, not everyone was satisfied. Far from it. Critics lambasted the club during the winter of 1980-81 for dumping Lynn, Fisk, and Burleson. Controversy raged. The ownership was labeled a band of profiteering cheapskates, even though the Red Sox payroll remains the sixth-highest in baseball.

When the Red Sox assembled in Winter Haven last spring under new manager Ralph Houk, whom some critics claimed was too old and too far out of it after two years in retirement, doomsayers predicted a disastrous year for the club on the field and at the gate. Many self-styled experts around the country picked them to finish just ahead of the Toronto Blue Jays, light years behind everyone else in the A.L. East.

out of a game, and they kept fans glued to their seats until the final out no matter what the score. In 32 of their 59 victories the Red Sox came from behind, 15 times in the seventh inning or later. Countless other rallies fell just short, but the fans recognized the spirit was there.

They saw Carney Lansford win a batting title, Mike Torrez turn his career around 180 degrees, Mark Clear intimidate hitters. They saw Dwight Evans blossom at long last into one of the league's most feared hitters, and Jerry Remy and Rick Miller ignite rallies and keep them going. They saw rookies Rich

JERRY REMY

There are a lot of positive things about the Red Sox, who have always boasted one of the most productive farm systems in baseball. There were eight hitters in camp this spring who had won major or minor league batting titles. There were two young pitchers, Bobby Ojeda and Brian Denman, who led their respective minor leagues in earned run average last summer. Another, Jerry King, led his league in strikeouts. Luis Aponte led his league in relief points (wins plus saves), and Dave Schoppee has led his league in saves each of the last two years. Excellent pitching prospects for the future include Mike Brown and Al Nipper, both of whom led their respective leagues in ERA last summer.

Last year the Red Sox made the transition from a group of superstars to a team surprisingly quickly and smoothly. The Red Sox are still a team in transition; but when it's finally completed these Red Sox just may live up to the lofty promises their predecessors never did.

"Some might argue that Smirnoff®vodka costs more. I'll concede that. But consider this...for just a little more than you pay for ordinary vodkas, you can have the great quality of Smirnoff.

"Faced with evidence like this you can reach just one conclusion. Smirnoff is simply the best value in vodka. I rest my case."

There's vodka, and then there's Smirnoff.

"What Walter taught me was to consistently concentrate on the basics, keeping my head down and hitting the ball through the middle. And it all came together. Instead of striking out the way I had in California (an average of 92 times a year), I made consistent contact (28 strikeouts in 438 plate appearances) and let everything else take care of itself."

Lansford's consistency was so great that he was under .329 only one month. That was June, when he had to DH for 10 games because of back and shoulder problems relating to a congenital $1\frac{1}{2}$ inch difference in length between his right and left legs.

Right before the strike, he went to an Anaheim chiropractor who recommended special lift shoes that were made for him by the Spot-Bilt Company. "I haven't had a problem since, either in the second half or all winter working out," says Lansford.

"That's one reason I really think that 1982 will be better. Another is that I've had another year with Walter. I know the park. I'm still in the learning stage. But now I know what I have to do to help us win."

And Boston knows what Carney Lansford is, and should be, for years to come.

Official Umpire Signals

Spectator Interference — batter, runner and other runner(s) will be placed at the base(s) which the umpires feel they would have reached with no interference.

Time — ball is dead, play suspended. This sign used when ball is foul, umpire then pointing to foul territory.

Batted Balls Hit Fair or Foul — if fair, umpire points to fair territory — if foul he raises arms overhead (as in "Time" above) and then turns and points to foul territory, and vocally calls "foul."

Awarding of Bases — this shows umpire designating base or bases awarded by overthrow or ground rule double.

Home Run — circular motion of umpire's arm denotes home run.

Safe — both arms parallel to ground indicates runner is safe.

Out — right arm extended out and up indicates runner is out.

Balls and Strikes — umpire makes no arm movement if he judges pitch a ball; if he judges the pitch a strike he uses an exaggerated movement of his right arm.

DON'T BUY A MAGNAVISION JUST BECAUSE IT PLAYS MOVIES.

Watch your favorite movie on Magnavision® and you'll hardly recognize it.

Because Magnavision gives you a sharp, astonishingly clear picture—better than any VCR can deliver. And most discs are recorded in brilliant stereo sound as well, so you can hear your movie sound track the way it was meant to be heard...a whole new dimension in video/audio entertainment systems.

But we didn't develop Magnavision just for movies.

Magnavision is a LaserVision player.

And you'll be able to do things with the LaserVision system that are impossible with other systems.

It all starts with a laser beam: the heart of Magnavision.

The laser beam picks up a picture from a special video disc (it's about the same size as a long-playing record, but it's made of tough aluminum plated acrylic).

Nothing touches the disc except a tightly focused beam of light which reads the 0.4 micrometer pit on the disc. So there's nothing to wear out, and you can expect to see the same sharp, clear picture time after time.

Variable speed slow motion, jitter-free freeze-frame on any of the standard disc's 54,000 individual frames, and a "Rapid Search" button let you find just the place you want, when you want it—in seconds.

This advanced technology also gives you room-filling stereo sound (you can play it through your own stereo system—frequency response is 40 to 20,000 HZ±3db).

You can enjoy movies, shows and concerts (wait till you hear Olivia Newton-John's* new video Physical disc in stereo!).

And the list grows longer every day.

There are also more and more "interactive" laser discs available—that's where the fun begins.

These are discs that let you participate, using the Magnavision wireless Infrared Remote Control.

You can learn How to Watch Pro Football[†] (and be quizzed afterwards); or try all the games and puzzles on the Grammy nominated The First National Kidisc[†].

You can go on art gallery tours and attend classical, pop or rock concerts.

Don't know how to filet a flounder? Take the Master Cooking Course[†] from Craig Claiborne and Pierre Franey. Just put your Magnavision into "Slow Motion" and they'll show you exactly how it's done.

You can see it all on Magnavision right now. Just stop in at your nearest Magnavision Dealer, push the "PLAY" button, and step into the future. To find your nearest dealer, call toll-free 800-447-4700.
